Not all the music in the world Sung e'er so sweet and clear. With all the master's magic wrought, Can thrill the silent ear.

Not all the sunshine in the skies, Though falling tenderly With kiss like lilies breath, can light The eye that can not see.

Not all the love the great world holds, With deepest longing said, And fraught with all that love can mean, Can reach a loved one dead.

Speak now the word of love and cheer, Thy heart its supshine spread. Swift be their lips their song to sing, 'Ere life and love have fled. -A W. Peach, in Farm Journal.

Winter Hats. Most picturesque and becoming are the new plush and velour hats for the autumn and early winter which are now being shown in the smart shops. The hats are in small, medium and large shapes, quite soft, so that they can be rolled and crushed to suit the face of the individual wearer. There are small hats with high round crowns, folded in around the top. Two-toned velour hats are among the newest models and there is an iridescent blue and black plush hat which is most striking and becoming to the average woman. A large sombrero of green velour with a facing of black velvet is trimmed with a black leather belt, dull leather with a gilt buckle. The shape is extremely smart. A rather high-crowned narrow brimmed hat of two-toned iridescent plush is in blue and black. The hat has a crown of shot silk and is trimmed with two made plumes of the plush. A small black plush hat, extremely dashing in effect, has a white satin band inside the brim and three fancy black

At first spider webs obscured their view, but after wiping these away they could see dimly that there was something at the bottom of the pot. It proved to be eight Spanish coins, covered with dust. How the dust got there it is impossible to say, as the large opening of the teapot was closed and the spout was so small that only a few drops at a time could have been poured from it. And in addition the hole was inclosed in the solid wall.

Local scientists will tackle the problem of how the spiders entered the pot-whether they were in it before the wall was closed, or whether they crept through some infinitesimal crack and thence into the spout of the pot.

The dagger has a pearl handle, carved by hand, carrying a feathery design on one side and on the other a shield and leaves. At one end it has a guard almost as large as those of the swords used by the crusaders. bearing a bas relief of a wolf's head. At the other end it has a similar ornament, the head of some animal which has not yet been identified.

The blade is seven inches long, sharp on one side and thick on the other. Its point is yet in fine shape and could do deadly work. It has peculiar red stains, believed to have been caused by blood. This weapon was found near the top of the wall, hidden by mortar, and it is thought it was tossed there for the purpose of concealment.

New York .- Pie eating matches are more or less familiar. Eel eating contests are much less so, for the simple reason that while commonly the pie eating is done in public and for a wager the eel eating is privately done and for fun, though the loser may be required to pay for all the eels eaten.

There is a little club composed of half a dozen substantial men, all lovers of sea food, that owns a comfortable bungalow in a pleasant spot on the Long Island shore, in which its members meet occasionally to eat a sea food dinner. They do their own cooking and they are all good cooks, with one or another of them notably able in some specialty. One is particularly good on chowder, others on fish and still others on eels. This club assembled in the bungalow lately for an eel dinner and incidentally for an eel eating contest.

Among fishermen acquainted with the eel in every aspect and among eel lovers generally he is considered as a qualified cel eater who can eat his own length in eels. But of course no man could eat his own length of big eels; the eels for such a test must not be more than half an inch in diameter, which is the standard size for eels to be eaten in eel eating contests. Such is also the size eel that eel lovers find most agreeable to the

For this particular occasion the club commissioned an eel fisherman to gather eels in sufficient quantity and also those that should fill the requirements, being not more than half an inch in diameter and of uniform size. It took the fisherman three days to do this, though of course in that time he gathered also many larger eels which he could market. The eels for the club he selected by sifting his catch through a sieve with a half-inch New York .- The champion light-

(Dy L. SHOEMAKER, in the Country | corn and one-third cottonseed meal by | but his most striking single feature Judicious management, a knowledge of cattle and values, and a natural liking for the work have resulted in the production of baby beef on a southvestern Iowa farm at a profit of $20 a head for several successive years. We used grade beef-bred cows and good pure-bred Angus bulls as the foundation stock for our operations. We reduced the cost of keeping the cows to a minimum in order to increase the profits on the finished calf. The cows were fed on cheap, homegrown roughages, supplemented in part by a grain ration consisting largely of corn and cottonseed meal fed in moderate quantities during the last few weeks prior to calving and continued until the grass became well grown in the spring. Care against feeding cottonseed meal in heavy quantities prior to calving lessened the danger of abnormal calf birth. Feeding the cows largely on such roughage as oat straw corn fodder and clover hay during the winter months, and letting them remain on grass as much as possible during the year, reduced the cost of keeping them to $28 a year. We managed to have most of the calves come in the spring, from March in good physical tone prior to calving by feeding a ration strong in ash and protein content so as to stimulate the milk flow gave the calf a strong start in life and also kept the cow in such condition as to tide her over the inclement spring weather, which is the hardest drain upon her. Through a careful management of the bull we succeeded in having the calves come within a short period of each other. He was never allowed to run with the cows during the day. A good bluegrass pasture was provided for him. and a grain ration consisting of oats bran and cottonseed meal was given during the heavy breeding season. The calves were allowed to run on the pasture with their mothers after the spring and until the flies had become bad and the grass no longer furnished an abundance of green feed. The yard at one time was well shaded, but the trees had been felled one by one until nothing remained standing but a few cedar trees and one monstrous oak. This oak stood in a corner not far from the front fence. It was the most perfect specimen of fine, symmetrical forest tree to be found in that part of the county, and Aunt Patsy had always been very proud of it. 'It's a grand type of endurance,' she had often been heard to say. 'Why, perfect as that tree is, it ought to be standing 500 years from now.' Knowing those to be her sentiments, the surprise of the neighbors was unbounded when it was learned that Aunt Patsy had sent for two woodcutters and had ordered them to chop down the oak tree three feet from the ground. "A few days after the tree had been postal law devoted to newspapers, that Congress was mad at them. That vindictive body has filled the law with demands upon the newspapers for information that is private property, in the purest sense of the word, and it is simply tryanny to take it away.

If the law had provided penalities for printing pictures of prize fighters and inserting incedent or fraudulent cures, it would have done a public benefit, but turning out on the common all the business of a newspaper is quite akin to a piece of impertience. Such a thing is of doubtful constitutionality, and that question is to be tried out in the courts .- Ohio State Journal.

TAFT PROSPERITY VS. WILSON HARD TIMES

Cynthiana Democrat: The Maysville Ledger declares "one Wilson tariff law took beef from the poor and gave them soup." Ridiculous, of course; but if true, the Wilson law was more nourishing than the Payne-Aldrich law, which takes beef from the poor and gives them the Ha, Ha.

Cynthiana Democrat: A dry goods merchant told us Monday that last week's business was the best he has enjoyed in Cynthiana, and he felt mighty good over it.

Our friend The Democrat has itself waxed fat under the beneficient results of Republican Protection, which reaches the remotest corners of business. The above two items clipped from the same issue of The Democrat shows the utter inconsistency of the Democratic wail of "taking from the poor and giving to the rich."

There never was such prosperity and there isn't a single business man in Cynthiana, or a farmer in Harrison who, if he tells the truth, but what will admit that every line of trade is flourishing to such an extent that it would be commercial suicide to overthrow the prosperity we are now enjoying and replace it with so-called Democratic free-trade, or what is as bad, the so-called "tariff for revenue, only."

The Cynthiana Democrat cannot cite one instance during the last fifty years, when under a Pemocratic PresiHow well I remember lasht fall at the rally I walked in line wid the workin men sure And felt just as proud as the King at beholding The fall of the rich and the rise of the poor. Sure, that's what they told me was meant by the victory

And wonder, I was elated at that As I stepped to the music just like and old sojer And wore a big rooshter on top o' me hat.

I invied the boss with his riches and comforts-No share of the profits I'd git, if agin

I voted to keep up the tariff that only Protected the bosses and burdened the min. I'm sure I'd get even now w'd ye, me honeys, I'll vote just as sure as my name is Pat,

For Grover, and then at the ratification I'll wear a big rooshter on top o' me hat.

I done it, bad luck to the day and hour, I'd gladly recall the same vote if I could, And once again hear the old stheam whistle soundin' That called me to work when the times they were good.

The boss he looks worried, the foreman he looks sour;

The old mill's deserted, and gloomy at that, And all I have left for the share of me glory Is the old battered rooshter I wore on me hat.

I mustered up courage to spake to the foreman, And ask him how long he would be idle, (You see The mill had been closed for a fortnight, and Loafin wid not a cent comin' was telling on me.) He says to me, you and I will both suffer, Me bizness is crippled me credit is flat, And if you get hungry, you know, he said slyly Ye can ate the old rooshter ye wore on yer hat.

So, there's the whole story and none can deny it. The truth must be told, though the Heavens should fall We made a mistake in defeatin' the party

R NO EXCUSE THIS TIME

The Past Shows That Democratic Success and National Disaster Are Inseparable.

For those who voted into power a Democratic low tariff administration twenty years ago there was the excuse that they had no lesson of experience to warn them from their course. More than thirty years had passed since the enactment of a pro tective tariff, industries were Courishing, wages rising and the treasury had a considerable surplus. There was a feeling that Cleveland had not been aca tariff for revenue only" would benwas still 'a the balance came a desperate labor struggle, amounting to a local war to inflame the public mind and evoke a demand for some action on the part of the rational government to curb the power of large corporations. The Sherman law, enacted by the Republican Congress, and signed by President Harrison July 2, 1890, was 'n force, but its powers had not been invoked, and its scope had not been determined by the highest judicial authority. Mr. Cleveland's supporters argued that radical reduction of the tariff would restrain corporate greed and prove a cure-all for economic evils, Mr. Cleveland himhis inaugural address.

The facts of history are that the tariff was reduced to a revenue basis. very few had money to buy, prices went down for the same reason, the former prosperity or, if they had no of the unemployed formed what was known as "Coxey's army" and marched on Washington to demand relief.

Such were the conditons under the the people waited longingly and repentingly for that four years to pass. Knowing that modified free trade had proved a failure, the Democrats offered free silver as their next panacea, but the people would have none of it and when 1896 came Republican voted in with a whoop.

Fifteen years have passed since a protective tariff was restored in 1897. Under President Taft the nation has achieved a height of prosperity far exceeding any in the past. Every legitimate industry is active, wages are higher than ever before, and the savings banks teem with thousands of millions of dollars of the wage earn-The Sherman act has been and is being enforced against every violator, and important legislation has been enacted for the greater protection of employees of public serv-

When disaster followed in the wake of Cleveland's second election the plea of ignorance could be offered for the false step that had invited the lean four years of misfortune. A similar plea could not be offered in the future, should a majority decide to make the trial of another Democratic administration. In view of past experience such a change would not be from a certainty to an uncertainty; it would be from a certainty of prosperity, industrial activity and good times generally to a certainty of depression, industrial paralysis, general reaction and privation. "I told you so!" could point with accusing and unerring finger to the costly and painful lesson of 1893-97, whose moral had been set at naught, and those who had brought about the new era of wretchedness could offer no palliation for

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blendid Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold.

CHAPTER XVII.-Continued. I stepped across the pile of things to the window, glancing out at the still smouldering ruins of the stable. Whatever had occurred, neither the lady nor Peter remained about the house. Of this I was satisfied, yet with the realization there came a sudden comprehension of my own helplessness to be of any aid. From the window where I stood not a house was visible. Just beyond the orchard the roads forked, a well-traveled branch circling to the left, and disappearing over the edge of a hill. As I traced it with my eyes a considerable body of mounted men suddenly appeared on the summit. Without fear that they could see me at that distance I watched eagerly as they trotted down the long slope. They were plainly a squadron of British Dragoons, their arms and cross-belts shining in the sun, in spite of the dust kicked up by their horses' hoofs.

I waited until convinced they were coming to the house, before drawing back out of sight. It was difficult to decide what was best for me to do. Should I wait, trusting to my rough clothing, and pass myself off as a countryman, or take advantage of the brief essayed the first choice I could extroopers on the trail; if not they might came tramping in along that road I could merely guess at-either they man officers, and Grant. I heard them some matter of importance, or else had been sent out hurriedly to discover what had become of Delavan's foragers. This supposition was the more likely, and they had taken the wrong road, thus missing Grant and his men

The must have cut through the orchard, leaping the low fence, for I heard the thud of hoofs even as I drew back into the upper hall. Then a voice gave a sharp command.

"Circle the men about the house Simmons. There is something wrong here, and I saw a fellow at that upper window as we came down the hill. Move quick, now!"

I must face them, and went forward to the head of the stairs, anticipating an easy explanation of my presence within. Already quite a squad was inside the front door bending over the bodies and staring about curiously.

The man addressed as colonel, a Ranger himself from his green uniform, looked up quickly and saw me. He called out an order, and three or four men sprang up the stairs, grasping and leading me down. I made no resistance, not realizing I was in any danger. The colonel, a tall man with gray mustache and goatee, and dark, searching eyes, faced me sternly.

"Was-was my daughter here?" he interrupted. "Yes, sir."

"My God! And Eric?" "Not to my knowledge-there was a man called Peter, this fellow, and a black slave or two. They were all I saw.'

"But why should Claire have been here," he asked as though dazed, "unless she came to meet her brother? I supposed her safe in the city."

"I do not pretend to understand the cause of her presence. But if you listen to my story perhaps you may know what to do." I paused an instant to get a grip on my thoughts. I need not tell all, confess my identity, or mention my personal relations with the daughter. "Oh, I had other business, and never got back along here until just at daylight this morning. Then I found things this way."

"You don't know what occurred,

It couldn't have been much later when these others "Pine Robbers, eh, colonel?" said got here and made the attack. Mike must have fought them at the front door, but that was all the fight made: there's no sign of any struggle inside.'

"Then they never got Claire," declared Mortimer positively. "That's a certainty, Seldon.

"Most assuredly," determined not to lose my temper, or to be moved by his threats. "It is the property of Colonel Mortimer, of the Queen's

BY ENOCH KYLE.

The man was going to get married. He had sown his wild oats, and now he meant to settle down. Well off, good looking, a first rate sportsman, a favorite with men and vomen alike, the Fates spinning busily had smiled upon him at birth and had woven only gold threads in the woof of his life.

It was because he felt it incumbent upon him to play the game that he decided to tell the woman he was going to marry of a certain newly closed episode in his life. The consideration that perhaps it would be as well for her to hear the tale from him first-hand, instead of embroidered with lies on a foundation of truth, as she might hear it from some one else, may have counted for something, too.

But the reason he gave himself as he knotted his tie carefully before the confession was that he "must play the game."

"I hardly know how to tell you, dear," he began awkwardly, standing tall and perfectly groomed on the hearthrug that afternoon. "It's so difficult to speak to women-pure women, like you-about certain things, but the fact of the matter is, I've been an awful rotter, Evelyn, and I feel it's up to me to own it. You're not marrying a saint, you know."

The fair-haired woman in the big armchair looked up at him sweetly out of innocent blue eyes: "Dear, I do know," she said gently. He moved uncomfortably. "But it's just what you don't know," he told her, 'that I'm worrying about. I'm not thinking of cards and racing, and things like that. It's about women I want to speak to you. Especially one woman." He paused and bit his lip nervously.

"Ah!" said the woman softly, looking down.

"She was a nice little thing," went on the man. "Not quite a lady, you know, but very pretty, and all that." Her father drank. She ran away from home. Hadn't a friend in the world when I picked her up. Only the streets in front of her. A good woman like you, Evelyn, can't realize what the horror of that means. . . . took a flat for her."

"Ah!" said the woman softly. "I lived with her more or less for three years," went on the man, gathering courage from her passiveness. She was very grateful for all I had done for her; she was really quite a nice little thing. But, of course, that's all over and done with now, I settled up finally with her today. I shall never see her again. There was no reason for you ever to know, Evelyn, only that I felt it wouldn't be quite playing the game not to tell you." "What has become of the girl?"

asked the woman, still softly and still looking away. The man shrugged his shoulders. "Still in the flat, I presume," he said carelessly. "The rent is paid till Desive. He bent down so that his face was very near the coils of hair wound smoothly round her head. "Don't let's talk about her any more," he urged. "It's all finished and done with. Now, don't frown, but just kiss me, and say you forgive me." "You're a very naughty boy, Jack," said the woman reprovingly, but she let him wind her smooth white arms round his neck, as he knelt beside her on the floor. "Then if you promise never, never to do it again, I'll forgive you," she said prettily.

He caught her, flushed and smiling, to him fiercely. "My saint!" he breathed upon her mouth."

In a daintily furnished room of a little flat in Queen's Club Gardens a woman lay dead upon the bed with an empty phial in her hand. There were traces of tears upon her white, cold cheeks; her closed eyelids were swollen. Her lover had failed her. There was nothing between her but the streets.

So she, too, had "played the game." God will decide who played it best.

Handy Life Insurance Policy. A curious festival takes place annually in the village of Isobe, in the southern province of Japan. The festival is called the Omita, and attracts large crowds from neighboring districts. The young men, stripping off their clothing, take their positions in a rice field, where they struggle violently with one another for possession of a decorated bamboo pole. The man who succeeds in pulling the pole down promptly cuts it into pieces, which he distributes among his less fortunate competitors, retaining a portion for himself. It is believed that if any one meets with a storm out at sea he can easily save himself from a watery grave by simply throwing a portion of this pole into the sea. With a handy life insurance policy of this kind to be obtained at the price of a little effort, it can be understood that the struggle for the pole is a distinctly strenuous

PISO'S REMEDY FOR COUCHS AND COL HE recent experience of a young American in the great unknown distrist of Peten, in Guatemala, has furnished for science one of the most valuable records in years regarding the life of what is perhaps the most ancient race of human beings in existence. In a trip just completed, in which he spent more than two years in the jungles of a territory whose mystery has for years repelled as well as attracted the adventurous, Russell Hastings Millward, America's youngest explorer, has not only captured the world's mileage record by traveling across more than three thousand miles of unknown country, but has opened up for the merchant archaeologist a land whose wealth has hitherto only been guessed at, says the New York

The popular impression that there is no more work for the twentieth century explorer could find no better refutation than in the exploit of this young man. The district of Peten, lying to the westward of British Honduras, between the Caribbean coast and the Bay of Campeche, has been known since time immemorial to all Central Americans as "The Mystery." There Millward has located lakes and mountains whose existence has hitherto been a matter of rumor only. For the first time a white man has penetrated those fastnesses and seen the ruins of temples and palaces which, now overgrown and buried under the foliage of the jungle, were, once the centers of magnificent cities. He has not only outlined the extent of the once flourishing empire of the Maya race, but of importance to the world of commerce, he has practically opened up a new field whose riches will in a few years be one of the chief assets of the Guatemalan government.

In contrast to the Caribs, or coast natives, the party contained a large percentage of Mayas of pure blood. Not only did they hold aloof from their Carib companions, but the consciousness that the white man was leading them up into the country sacred, according to tradition, to their ancestors, who would avenge the insult of trespass, terrified them. When night came on they were usually in a state of panic, and during the day the slightest accident out of the ordinary served to put them on their guard against some imaginary evil. Millward, talking to them in their language, tried repeatedly to discover the cause of their fears. The nearest he came to it was on one occasion when, ascending a ridge of land one noon, his machete men suddenly stop-

did not know how long-a great Maya hunter had prowling through that part of the jungle. On the ridge of land before them some jungle beast leaped out upon him and killed him. According to the machete men, therefore, this hunter's fierce spirit was still roaming that hillside, raging in its agony and jealous of any mortal presence. Should a man attempt to go up that hillside and cross that ridge some horrible doom which only a spirit could invent would befall him. . The men ended by flatly refusing to venture upon the highland, and at last Millward compromised by crossing the ridge alone and sending the Mayas around the hill to meet him on the other side.

But it was during the nights that the effect of the jungle upon the men was most evident. In some respects their superstitions were justified by the unearthly sunset effects and the appearance of the sky at night. The sun sank in a blaze of glory, followed almost immediately by the gloom of midnight. With the arrival of darkness the appearance of the constellations, large and wonderfully brilliant, was awe-inspiring. Far off on the northern horizon the north star appeared, while on the other side of the zenith sparkled the Southern Cross, for this strange country is said to be the only spot on the globe where this combination of planets is visible. The Mayas, alive to every new occurrence, were quick to notice this the first night when camp was pitched on an upland above the jungle, and for hours they discussed the phenomenon, squatting around the fires and looking up at the stars.

By this time the expedition had begun to penetrate the forbidden country, and almost immediately the first signs of an ancient civilization appeared.

One day Millward and his men, hacking their way forward, came out suddenly into a little glade in the woods, in the center of which stood a large cylindrical stone. Its sides and upper surface were a solid mass of exquisite carving. in which the figures of birds, flowers and the form of the serpent were repeated in a riot of designs. On the top of the stone a sloping basin was hollowed out, and from this ran a channel to the outer edge. There was no room for doubt that it was one of the ancient sacrificial stones of the Mayas, and that the natural glade in which it had rested for centuries was once the sylvan holy of holies of the Maya priests of the locality, where they "averted evil" to their people by human sacrifices.

It was the finding of this sacrificial stone that introduced the first of the stone villages. Although literally imbedded under the rank undergrowth of the jungle, enough was uncovered to show that at some time it must have been a place of importance. Ruined columns lay about. and great slabs of granite, some of them weighing many tons, were scattered in irregular heaps. The wavering lines of broken slabs and columns which in places showed through the foliage indicated the general outline of streets. In the decoration and carving of these slabs there was every mark of an art which, although in its form widely at variance with that of the Egyptians. is perhaps as old. There were indications, too, of a culture as ancient. At the time of the conquest of the Mayas, in a warfare which began about 1540 and continued for years, a city called Tihoo, on whose site the Spanish Merida is now located, is supposed to have been the capital of the empire. The old Spanish chroniclers relate that the palaces and pyramids of the Maya city were so ancient that from the mounds built by the earliest inhabitants

This was the discovery of four large and hitherto unknown lakes. Here, again, Millward found that their cess?" existence, if not their location, was already known to his Mayas under the name of "The Four Sisters."

Maya villages continued to dot the jungles as the party progressed eastward, and in all of them the explorer was well received. As Millward worked further on in the general direction of Belize, his destination, and began to approach the other coast he came upon occasional settlements of Caribs. In physique and strength he considers these men far superior to the Mayas. The new territory, whose resources have been revealed through the enterprise of this young explorer, is believed to be one of the most valuable finds, commercially and historically, of many decades. The untold riches of its forests are not only accessible, but Mr. Millward is likely to prove to a large extent its developer as well as its discoverer, since he already is at work on plans for the establishment of a direct route overland from the Caribbean Sea to the Gulf of Mexico, which would open up the greaterp art of the region to travel and commerce.

Mrs. Hansen, In a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven The E. R. Webster Co. Importers years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble.

My husband asked me to try Cardui. I felt better after the first bottle, and now. I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble-try Cardui. Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the woman-

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it. N. B.— Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept., Chatta-nooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., for Special Instructions, and 64-page book, "Home Treatment or Women," sent in plain wrapper, on request.
